Abstract of the disclosure

This invention proposes an indexing method for mapping multiple segments of coded fields into a table-structure field. This indexing method can complete resolving address mapping within a short delay, and it has a collision-free characteristic when total bit-width of variation for coded fields is the same as the bit-width of the table. This method can be used to resolve VPI/VCI mapping for the ATM technologies.